The Supreme Court judge the compremise bill would appoint would, in the words of a late Boorkeeper of the House of Representatives, be a biger man, than 10,000,000 of people.

According to all accounts the average Congressman of either party stands of at a distance and looks at that compromise measure waif he thought there was a can of nitroglycerine concealed somewhere in its soluminous folds.

Instirring up recruite for his army of 100,000 men, General Watterson, 2 a.m., says. "The people must act for themselves. Without their support the House of Representatives is powerless." According to Henry, "the people" is the Democracy of the solid South.

Electricity to Coarrel Fractious Horses.

French Ingenuity has invested a method of controlling the most fractious horses without any exertion on the part of the driver. The horse of the future is not to be driven by ordinary coins, but by electricity conditions with them. The coachman is to have under his seat an electromagnetic apparatus, which he works by means of a little handle. One wire is carried through the rein to the bit, and another to the crupper, so that a current once set up goes the entire longth of the animal sings the spine. A salden sinck will, we are gravely assured, stop the most viothe animal along the spine. A saiden sinck will, we are gravely assured, stop the most violent ranaway or the most obstinate jubber. The ereature, however strong and however victous, is "at once transformed into a sort of incidensive horse of wood, with the feet firmly natled to the ground." Curiously enough the very opposite result may be preduced by a succession of small shocks. Under the influence of these the veriest series can be suddenly enthweed with a vigor and free indescribable. What is the effect upon the condition of the horse is not stated, but the Siede congratulates M. F. Fancher upon "an invention quality original and salutiory," and one which places in the horse which is a sovereign as it is invisible.—

Let Them Tell What They Know.

To the Editor of the Notional Republican:

Sin I learn that there are several women in this city who, having tired of the frequent demands made on them by the police authorities fir immunity to run their establishments, are authorises to be summoned before the Congressional committee that they may contribute their safe toward the discomiture of Richards and the "official" detectives. Some one in the interest of police headquarters has tried to suppress those women by telling them that the nature of their avonation will provent their being believed on the witness stand. Now, Mr. Editor, if "reformed thieves" are allowed to give evidence and attempt to injure the characters of good citizens, in the prostitutes may not be allowed to testify. While their reputations are bad I apprehend that none of them have ever confessed in open court to having obtained money under false pretenses. Let this class of women receive assurances of protection against the wrath of Richards, Cook & Co., and they will not be store turboom themselved quarters. What a talse could Madane Poster unfold!
